Medical termination of pregnancy is now considered a safe option for the termination of pregnancy from 5 to 9 weeks, however, no medical practitioner can provide a guarantee or assurance regarding the outcome of any medical treatment, and this clinic has an obligation to warn you of the known risks when undergoing a medical termination of pregnancy, regardless of how unlikely these risks are. It is possible to experience a complication of a severity which could lead to infertility or in very rare cases could even be fatal although complications of this severity are extremely rare.

- Description of the medical abortion procedure - The doctor will use an ultrasound to verify that the pregnancy is in your uterus and is between 5 to 9 weeks. While at the clinic, you will be given an oral medication (mifepristone) which prevents the pregnancy from developing. You will be provided with another type of medication (misoprostol) which must be taken 36 to 48 hours later at home where you must have support from another responsible person and be within 1 hour from a hospital. This second medication causes your uterus to contract and expel the pregnancy tissue, This part of the process may be painful and the bleeding may be heavy and prolonged but is usually able to be relieved with oral pain relief. You must agree to return to the clinic for follow-up in 14 days where we will perform an ultrasound scan to verify that the pregnancy has been terminated. In some cases, additional follow-up visits and tests may be required.

Alternatives to medical abortion include:

- Surgical abortion - Can be performed between 5 - 15 weeks at the Private Clinic and usually only involves a single visit lasting about 3 hours. The pregnancy is verified with an ultrasound scan and you will then be given IV sedation which make you sleepy and will provide strong pain relief. Your cervical canal is opened gently to about 6-8 mm diameter through which a sterile plastic suction tube is passed into your uterus and the pregnancy tissue is removed with gentral suction. A final ultrasound scan is performed to check that the procedure was successful and to minimise the risk of having tissue remaining.

Known possible complications of the proposed medical abortion process:

- Retained pregnancy tissue. This is where small pieces of pregnancy tissue remain in the womb. This may cause cramping pain, prolonged or heavy bleeding, or infection. This occurs in about 1 in 20 medical abortions and may require a surgical procedure to clear the tissue that was left behind.
- Clot retention. A blood clot builds up in the womb. This can cause cramping pain, and a surgical procedure may be required to remove the blood clot from the womb.
- Infection. An infection following a termination of pregnancy is uncommon (about 1 in 200 however, it is important that any suspected infection is treated immediately. You should always call the clinic or consult your doctor if you experience any signs of infection such as prolonged fever or unusual vaginal discharge.
- Haemorrhage. Heavy bleeding (over 300mls of blood loss) during the medical abortion occurs in about 1 in 500 patients and is usually caused by retained pregnancy tissue. This usually required a surgical procedure to remove any remaining tissue, and in some cases, transfer to a hospital and a blood transfusion may be needed.
- Failed termination procedure. In about 1 in 500 termination procedures, the pregnancy is not removed and continues inside the womb. If there is any doubt about the result of the medical abortion procedure, we will ask you to have additional blood tests to monitor your hormone levels and confirm that the pregnancy has ended . You should call the clinic immediately if pregnancy symptoms continue or if a urine pregnancy test shows a positive result at more than three weeks after the procedure.
- Adverse reactions to medicines. The medications used to perform the abortion process have been in use for many years and are known to be safe for most women. However severe allergic reactions are sometimes possible and must be treated immediately in hospital.
- Depression or mood problems. The majority of women do not find an abortion to be emotionally or psychologically harmful, although some women find it stressful or difficult in the short-term. Most women cope well and do not experience long-term problems. However, depression or mood problems can sometimes occur in situations where emotional support is lacking, when the woman was not completely clear about her decision, when she was feeling pressured into choosing a termination or when there has been a previous history of depression or mental health problems. If you suspect that you are at risk in relation to this issue, you should mention it to the doctor so that a referral for further counselling can be arranged.

- Additional unexpected costs: It is sometimes necessary to arrange for additional diagnostic tests or for treatment at another facility by another medical practitioner, in circumstances that were not foreseeable or not known to be needed at the time this consent was given. You will be advised if any such tests or referrals are necessary, but you will be responsible for any costs that may arise if this happens.
- The medications used to terminate an early pregnancy can be very dangerous if taken without supervision from a doctor who is trained and experienced in this field. I understand that I must not give these tablets to anyone else and I will safely dispose of any tablets which may be left over after the medical abortion is completed.
- I understand that a surgical abortion may be required if the bleeding is prolonged and/or extremely heavy, or if pregnancy tissue remains, The medications are known to cause birth defects so in the event of a continuing pregnancy, a surgical termination will be required.

The clinic will issue you with an instruction sheet before you leave the clinic. It is important that you read this sheet and follow these instructions carefully. Please contact the clinic immediately if you have any concerns about symptoms that you may be experiencing
